Welcome

Have you ever wondered what Willie Stargell's favorite food is? Or, how about Bill Madlock's favorite song? Well, the answers to those questions, along with tidbits about all your favorite Bucs, unfold for you in the following pages of the 1982 Pittsburgh Pirates Yearbook.

Also, you'll see that some former Pirate greats have become permanent Pittsburgh residents, and are vital members of the city's business community.

And, along with these features, you'll get an insider's look at "Pirate City," the Bucs' Spring training facility in Bradenton, Florida.

So, read on. We hope you enjoy the 1982 Yearbook, and we are looking forward to seeing you often at Three Rivers Stadium, rooting for your Pirates. Give 'em a Thrill!!!

our business is buildings.

We affect the lives of thousands of people in Pittsburgh every day, yet most of them aren't even aware of it. And frankly, as the largest building management and leasing agents in downtown Pittsburgh, that's just the way we like it!

You see, we believe efficient building management and leasing should go unnoticed. The people who work in a building (or who own it) shouldn't have to worry about such things as contracting with responsible tenants, controlling building temperatures, monitoring fire safety systems, day-to-day programming of the elevators, or around the clock building security.

These areas, along with others, are the responsibility of a professional building management and leasing team like John W. Galbreath & Co. We're experts in management and leasing, as well as real estate development, commercial and investment brokerage, project planning, design consultation, financing, and construction management.

So, if our efforts toward making things run smoothly, comfortably, and efficiently sometimes go unnoticed, it's okay ... that's our business.

Power Hitter

A snap of the wrists releases a tremendous surge of controlled energy. Getting good wood on the ball requires all of the player's physical and mental energies.

At Westinghouse, we understand productive energy. And all the ways it can be generated, transmitted, applied and appreciated.

Westinghouse

A powerful part of your life

Some of Our Past Heroes

A few of them were Pittsburgh natives, but some came from places like Dorris, California; Canaan, Connecticut; Lafayette, Indiana and Stephentown, New York, to help make the Pittsburgh Pirates one of Baseball's exciting teams.

They are our past heroes. The Nellie Briles', Steve Blass', Bob Friends' and ElRoy Faces'—who gave us countless thrills at Forbes Field and Three Rivers Stadium.

During their playing careers, these former Pirate greats called Pittsburgh their "Second Home" but now that their feats on the playing field are only memories, these players have made the Pittsburgh area their permanent residences and have become active and vital members of our business community.

Baseball fans will never forget the glory they brought to our City and in return, these players will never forget what the City gave them in return.

Pirates in the Hall of Fame

As an illustration of the Pittsburgh Pirates' proud history, eleven former Bucs are presently members of Baseball's Hall of Fame as direct results of their service to baseball while members of the Pirates.

The initial Bucco inductee was Carnegie, PA native, shortstop Honus Wagner, who was selected on the Hall's first ballot in 1936 with four other legendary greats, Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson.

Besides claiming a .328 lifetime average, Wagner, a son of German immigrant parents, exemplified Pittsburgh's heritage. He was a mine worker at the age of twelve, whose style, because of a lack of formal instruction, was often described as clumsy. But his lack of technique was overcome by his sheer power and desire to play the game.

Wagner's teammate and manager Fred Clarke was the second Pirate elected to Baseball's prestigious hall. Clarke, a lifetime .315 hitter known for his speed and aggressiveness was selected in 1945. Besides playing centerfield for Pittsburgh, he also managed the team to four pennants and 1343 victories, the most by any Pirate manager, in his sixteen seasons as the team's skipper between 1900-1915.

The name of the Bucs' third inductee into the Hall, Pie Traynor, was synonymous with third base. Known for his prominence in the field as the Pirates' regular third sacker between 1922-1935, he also posted a lifetime .320 batting average. Ten times in his career, Traynor finished seasons with a batting average over .300 though his finest years were between 1927-1930 when he averaged .350 in addition to an average of 25 stolen bases a season. Like Clarke, Traynor also spent time as the Bucco manager when he succeeded George Gibson in 1934 before being replaced by Frank Frisch in 1939.

The Pirates' fourth selection to Coopers-town, Paul Waner, a .333 lifetime hitter, would have starved an optometrist to death, for he had the finest eye in the game. For twelve consecutive seasons between 1926-1937, this quiet, two-strike specialist rang-up batting averages rivaling the national debt, .380; .373; .370; .368 and .354, and never dipped below .309. Known as 'Big Poison', Waner played along side his younger brother Lloyd 'Little Poison' Waner on the Pirates between 1927-1940.

If Omar Moreno were said to have modeled himself after anyone, it would be the Bucs' fifth electee Max Carey. Like Moreno, Carey performed his magic in centerfield, where he played in more games than any NL outfielder (2,421) and was credited with more put-outs (6,363), and on the basepaths, where he was known as the perfectionist of base stealing. Carey swiped 738 bases in his career, and because of his scientific approach, was rarely ever thrown out. In fact in 1922, Carey was gunned down only twice in fifty-three theft attempts.

While Carey qualified for the Hall of Fame because of his theft ratio and Waner was elected via his hitting credentials, Deacon Bill McKechnie was selected on the basis of his intelligence and leadership as a major league manager. In 1925, he brought the Bucs back, who were down by a 3-1 deficit to the Washington Senators, to capture the World Series by defeating Hall of Famer Walter Johnson in the seventh game. Besides leading the Pirates to the top, McKechnie also captured pennants for St. Louis in 1927 and Cincinnati in 1939 and 1940.

'Little Poison' Lloyd Waner, who was once pronounced as the greatest of centerfielders by Pie Traynor, was a born lead-off man with a .317 lifetime average and a 1967 inductee into the Hall. In his first three seasons with the Pirates, Waner chalked up 678 hits and scored 388 runs, while in his first twelve years he batted under .300 only twice and regularly reached heights of .355 and .362. 'Little Poison' and 'Big Poison' combined for 5,144 hits in their thirteen illustrious seasons together as Pirates before splitting and completing their careers as single acts.

Innovator, organizer, developer, reconstructor and pioneer of several variables existent in baseball today, Branch Rickey was the Pirates' eighth inductee into the Hall of Fame. A veteran of sixty years in baseball as a catcher, coach and executive for St. Louis, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh, Rickey will be best remembered for initiating the present minor league system and for his inauguration of black players into baseball.

One year after the selection of Lloyd Waner and Branch Rickey, .321 lifetime hitter and 1925 World Series hero Kiki Cuyler was inducted to the Hall of Fame. Cuyler batted over .300 ten times in his career and concluded four seasons with averages over .350. In his prime between 1924-1931, he averaged 37 stolen bases a season while allowing his average to dip below .300 only once. Known for his hustle and willingness to take the extra base, Cuyler led the NL with 26 triples in 1925 and recorded 50 doubles in 1930.

After an illustrious career as a lifetime .317 hitter, World Series hero and Gold Glove outfielder, the immortal Roberto Clemente was enshrined in the Hall in 1973. In his eighteen seasons as a Pirate, he recorded more hits (3,000), at-bats (9,454), total bases (4,492), singles (2,154) and appeared in more games (2,433) than any Bucco in the history of the organization. He established himself as the only player to record 3,000 hits as a pirate on September 30, 1972, slightly before his tragic death later that December 31.

Ralph Kiner is recalled as the greatest Pirate righthanded power hitter and is also the latest Bucco inductee into the Hall of Fame. Most other legendary sluggers, such as Ruth and Aaron, were protected from being pitched around by other power hitters present in the line-up, but Kiner always stood alone. Remarkably, he either won or tied for the homerun championship every year from 1946-1952. Kiner's 54 round trippers in 1949 not only led the league but also established the all-time single season Pirate high-water mark for homeruns in a season.

Pirate City

When the Pittsburgh Pirates pack up their gear and head south for spring training, the players can expect to find themselves busy at all times.

There are always plenty of instructors to handle the many drills, but more importantly, there are four fields at the Pirate City complex in Bradenton, Fla., where the Pirates have held spring training since 1969.

Pittsburgh, before going to Bradenton, had been in Fort Myers for its pre-season workouts and games. The Pirates then left the southwest town and negotiated a 40-year contract with the City of Bradenton.

Pirate City, a $1 million complex located in east Bradenton, is one of the finest in the country. It officially opened on Feb. 16, 1969 and on March 7, the Pirates held their first official workout.

The entire complex is on about 49 acres of land and consists of a Pirates' Inn, which has a lounge for players to relax and watch television, administrative offices, conference room and dining room; a dormitory-type setup which has 73 rooms (39 for the minor leaguers, 29 for the major leaguers and five apartments); a clubhouse, which has dressing stalls for players, a trainer's room, equipment room, manager's and coaches' office; a recreation room that has pool tables and ping pong tables; a batting cage, and four fields, which are named for Paul and Lloyd Waner, Pie Traynor, Honus Wagner and former Bradenton Mayor Sterling "Lefty" Hall.

In the middle of the four-field setup is a viewing tower and there also is another batting cage.

Pirate City

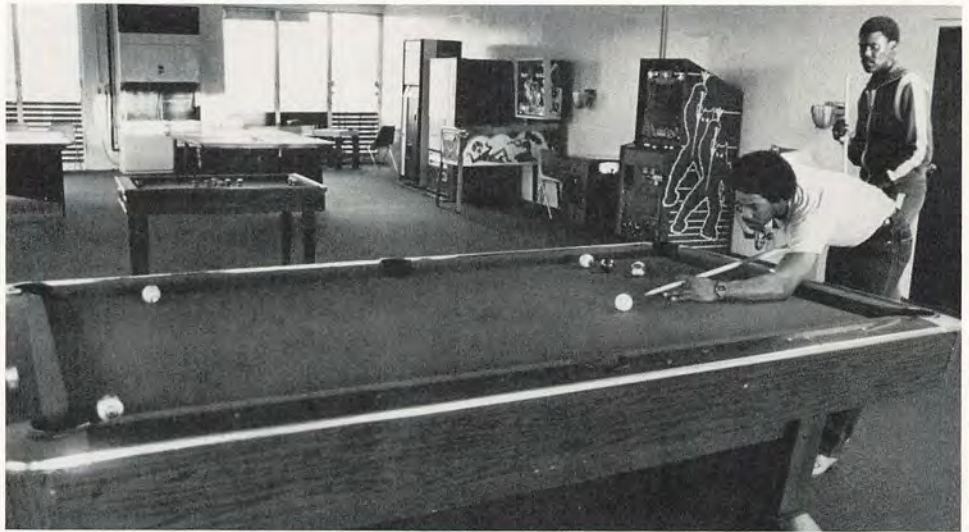

The Pirate City complex is managed by George and Betty Mazza, who are in their third year of overseeing the things that go on there.

The Pirates' major league camp begins workouts at Pirate City but then transfers to McKechnie Field about the second week of March, which is when the minor league teams report and take over the facilities.

Once the major league and minor league camps have been completed, Pirate City sits idle until June when the Gulf Coast League, which consists of rookie teams from as many as eight organizations, begins its games. The GCL lasts until September and not long after that the Florida Instructional League commences and runs through the middle of November.

McKechnie Field, named after Bill McKechnie, is the site of the Pirates' spring training games and also is used for GCL games.

McKechnie Field, during spring training games, has a seating capacity of more than 4,600.

What is a Pirate Captain?

Pirate Captains are a group of men and women, influential in the Pittsburgh business community, organized with the purpose of promoting baseball in the tri-state area.

"They have helped the club become much more influential in the community," claims Steve Greenberg, who heads up the Captains.

"Since their conception three years ago, the Captains have contributed considerably to the Bucs in the area of season and group sales."

To maintain membership in the Captains, a member must sell a minimum of four full season ticket plans. Prizes are awarded to the Captains from that point upward, based on varying levels of achievement, with the top prize being a trip to the Pirates' Spring Training home in Bradenton, Florida.

"We're always looking for new members," said Greenberg.

If you are interested in becoming a Pirate Captain, Steve Greenberg may be contacted at 323-5000.

Now commemorate the showcase games with their official balls from Rawlings.

The All-Star Game. The minute it's mentioned, memories come to mind of baseball at its best. Like Ted Williams sending Rip Sewell's "eephus" over the fence in '46.

And if you're like most baseball fans, you have your favorite World Series moments, too. Maybe they include Don Larsen getting the twenty-seventh out in his perfect game of '56, or Brooks Robinson sweeping the hot corner clean in '70.

You remember the All-Star and World Series plays because they're the special events—the showcase games. That's why Rawlings, the only official maker of major league baseballs, now makes available to you the only official commemorative baseballs for the 1982 All-Star Game and World Series.

These are not reproductions, but the real baseballs Rawlings manufactures for the majors. They're completely authentic, right down to the signature of the Commissioner of Baseball. Each ball also comes with a color-coordinated stand for attractive display among your other sports memorabilia.

Put in your order today by completing and mailing the coupon. Veteran collector or beginner, you'll be making a valuable investment in the only official balls commemorating baseball's showcase events!
